29	30	This image was made for the support campaign for "Honey Bea," Black trans woman CeCe McDonald. In June 2011, CeCe was arrested and charged with murder in Minneapolis after defending herself and friends from a racist and transphobic attack. The subsequent support campaign drew international attention to the case and spotlighted the racialized transphobia of the criminal justice system and society at large, demonstrating how police and prisons offer no safety to Black trans people (or anyone). The campaign helped build the intersectional abolitionist analysis of the queer left locally, preparing the soil for the future George Floyd Uprising. Released in 2014 after serving 19 months in a men's prison, McDonald has dedicated her life to the movement.
